

London, Sept. 2, 1846.

My Dear Friend Jackson:

I meant to have written you a long letter, ere this, on matters & things here, but time is so rapid in his movements, and I am so busy, that I have not been able to do so. I have only a moment to say, that I am well, and that the mission is prospering gloriously. I hope all is well with you. My best love to all your household.

I must throw myself on your kindness to see that my quarterly bills are met on the 1st of October, holding me responsible for what may be advanced. I would not trouble you, were I on the other side of the "big pond." My dear friend Wendell Phillips, I am sure, will be glad to co-operate with you. I can add no more, now, except that I am,

Affectionately yours,
Wm. Lloyd Garrison.
Francis Jackson.
